Funny, feisty and feminist:
The Mills & Boon Modern Girl's Survival Guides.

Introduction

Celine Dion confidently predicted that her heart would go on, even if, from a medical perspective, the romance between Kate and Leo was dead in the freezing North Atlantic waters. The sea of love can be a lot like that: full of unexpected icebergs in the shape of disapproving parents, interfering friends, unwarranted advances from co-workers and unexplainably odd matches on dating apps.

There's no denying that it's choppy out there, and if you're looking for love (or just someone to while away the long, dark, lonely evenings with until something better turns up), you're going to have deal with some bad stuff: unrequited crushes, rubbish boyfriends and the kind of outings that may leave permanent scars – actual scars, like a bad tattoo with both your names entwined in a gothic heart, or mental scars, like choosing ‘Blurred Lines’ as ‘your song’ before you’d actually worked out what the lyrics meant.

And once you’ve found love? Well, it’s not all plain sailing in the love boat. There’s infidelity, jealousy, arguments, and lies, and that’s often before you actually get to know them.

But still, the heart wants what the heart wants, and this entirely positive and optimistic guide to relationships will steer you through the ups and downs of romance. Or at least guide you into the arms of a black-hearted pirate who knows where the treasure is buried.

Biological Clock

Amelia and Rosetta are worried about their biological clocks.

But they're more worried about how close they are to killing the next person who reminds them that time is not on their side.

They have made a yodelling meter. Partly to distract them from the remorseless tick-tocking, but mostly to drown out the perpetual questions about their currently empty wombs.

Bunny Girl

'I'm really sorry I scared you. It was supposed to be a sexy surprise! Like a bunny girl thing?

No, I know rabbits don't hatch out of eggs.
It made sense in my head.'

End of Sample.
